Cattle Are Brought Into Stockyards by Police Convoy

Attempt to Resume Trading Despite 9-Day Strike Interruption

FARMER IS STONED

Strikers Heave Bricks at Stockman Awaiting Entry

CHICAGO.—(P)—Cattle and hogs were driven into the Chicago stockyards Friday under a police escort as commission men sought to resume trading, which has been stopped for nine days by a handlers' strike. Four hundred more employees, commission handlers, joined the strike Friday after declaring a lockout Thursday night.

The commission men themselves handled the first shipments. Meanwhile the strikers lounged on the sidewalks. The first violence came when a farmer bring in cattle was showered with bricks as he waited to enter the yards. Trading was slow to start.

Alleged Killer of Husband Is Freed

Mrs. Eva Newsome Given Directed Verdict of Acquittal

MENA, Ark.—(P)—Circuit Judge A. P. Steel gave a directed verdict of acquittal Friday in the case of Eva Newsome, who was accused of the poison murder of her husband, Dan Hatton, who died while she and her present husband were living with him.

Woman on Trial

MENA, Ark.—The trial of Mrs. Eva Newsome, indicted for murder in connection with the death of her former husband, Dan Hatton, got under way late Thursday in circuit court. The testimony of three witnesses was heard before the session was adjourned.

Otho Hatton, 15, son of Dan and Mrs. Hatton, told of a drinking and fishing party the night his father died. The boy's testimony was that his mother applied first aid when Hatton got drunk and bruised his face. He said she apparently lived happily in the same home with the man she had divorced last December.

Sheffir Walter E. Jones told of finding strychnine in Mrs. Newsome's trunk after he had learned of Hatton's death. He also told of Mrs. Newsome's objection to the holding of an autopsy on Hatton's body and of wanting to hurry up with the burial.

Dr. F. Q. McElroy, a physician, called to view Hatton's body after it had been found May 23, said that there were visible signs that strychnine caused his death. Prosecuting Attorney Jim Jackson will offer for a motive for Hatton's death, the desire of his former wife to obtain possession of the 40-acre farm the couple owned.

Federal Buildings to Be Utilitarian

Morgenthau Declares U. S. Won't Put Up Any "Monuments"

WASHINGTON.—The era of needless imposing federal building construction, as far as Secretary Morgenthau is concerned, is at an end. The Treasury secretary said Thursday that expensive structures had been built in many cities where more utilitarian and less expensive would have sufficed, and said all plans on which work had been started were being drastically revised. Structures to be turned out under the new program would not be merely "factory buildings," he said.

"There will be no more monumental buildings," he added. The Miami Herald, citing Morgenthau as saying he would not build a monument, said: "There will be no more monumental buildings," he added.

Futrell Denies Supreme Court Rumor

He Will Not Pick Kirby's Successor Until Next Month

Governor Points Out That This Will Save State $1,000

HERE FOR ADDRESS

Re-Election Speech at 4 p. m. Friday, Baptist Church Lawn

Governor J. Marion Futrell, arriving in Hope shortly after noon Friday for a 4 p. m. campaign speech on the First Baptist church lawn, vigorously denied a rumor-story from Little Rock that he would appoint Supreme Court Librarian J. T. Castle to the vacancy created in the Arkansas Supreme Court by the death of Justice W. F. Kirby.

"I won't make any appointment until just before the court reconvenes in September," the governor told The Star at Hotel Barlow, where he registered for the day, "and by taking advantage of the fact that the court is in recess for these several weeks I will save the state $1,000 in running expense."

"I haven't intimated anywhere to anybody whom I expect to appoint," he concluded, "although of course several names have been under consideration."

Little Rock Rumor
LITTLE ROCK.—(P)—The appointment of Supreme Court Librarian J. T. Castle to the vacancy caused by the recent death of Associate Justice W. F. Kirby was reported in alleged informed circles Friday to have been decided upon by Governor Futrell.

The governor, who is on a campaign trip to southwest Arkansas, is understood to have changed his previously announced intention to await the reconvening of the court September 17 before naming Kirby's successor. Kirby's death left Basil Baker, of Jonesboro, undisputed for the seat and it was originally understood the governor would appoint Baker after the primary.

Hitler Becomes Absolute Ruler

Germany Accepts Situation With Traditional Calm

Copyright Associated Press
BERLIN.—Adolf Hitler, in a series of lightning-like moves, made himself absolute dictator of Germany Thursday.

He concentrated in his own hands the functions of president and chancellor as soon as the aged president and patriot, Paul von Hindenburg died at Neudeck.

Then he called for and received an oath of personal allegiance from officers and men of the entire army and navy.

After these moves, amounting to a virtual coup d'etat, the former lance corporal, who succeeded a field marshal, called for the presidential plebiscite on August 19.

Although desiring the functions of the presidency, Hitler declined to accept the title, holding that the "greatness of the deed has given to the title of reich president unique and non-repeating significance."

In a letter to Wilhelm Frick, minister of the Interior, Hitler outlined his plans to assume the office without this title, saying he desired henceforth to be known as "father and reich chancellor."

He directed that a "free secret election" be held and that centralization of power in his hands and such other matters as may be necessary.

"Steering the conviction that all authority of the state must proceed from the people and by them be ratified in secret, free election, I request you immediately to lay the decision of the cabinet, with possible necessary additions before the German people for a free plebiscite," he wrote.

Plebiscites in Germany have come to mean rubber stamps and the impending "free elections" promises to be no exception.

The details of the plebiscite have not been announced.

The rapidity of the action which concentrated authority over 65,000,000 Germans in the hands of one man recalled the speech with which the Nazis first came to power on the morning of January 30, 1933.

Once again the Germans showed that they are a disciplined people, trained to obedience. The change from a trained to a free people is a theoretical possibility, but it is a long way off.

Now we're having the kind of weather we've been waiting for. It's a good thing. We've been waiting for it.

McAlister Leads for Governorship

McKellar Wins Senate Renomination in Tennessee

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—(P)—Governor Hill McAlister, seeking renomination for a second term, maintained a comfortable lead over his opponent, Lewis S. Pope Thursday night as returns were tabulated from the Democratic primary.

Senator K. D. McKellar easily won renomination for a six-year term over Dr. John R. Neal, Knoxville lawyer who was chief of defense council in the Scopes evolution trial at Dayton nine years ago.

After trailing for several hours, Senator Nathan L. Bachman forged ahead of Representative Gordon Browning shortly after midnight. Returns from 1,163 out of 2,277 precincts gave Bachman 58,198 and Browning 56,229.

The contest for nomination to the senate is for the two years remaining of the term of Cordell Hull, who resigned to become Roosevelt's secretary of state. Immediately upon Hull's resignation last year, Governor McAlister appointed Bachman to the vacancy to serve until the November election.

Returns showed:
Governor—1,265 precincts out of 2,277. McAlister 80,209, Pope 70,443.

Long term senate—967 precincts; McKellar 80,814; Neal 13,358.

Three dead by gunfire were left in the wake of the balloting. Two of the killings were attributed directly to the election.

At Madisonville, John Tallent, 40, was shot to death in a political quarrel just preceding the primary. His assailant was wrested from officers by a relative and escaped.

Someone shot Guy Sutherland to death in a crowd watching returns in front of a newspaper office at Pikeville and escaped.

Near Parsons a farmer identified as John Walker was wounded fatally. First reports were that his death was due to a primary election dispute, but later Constable C. L. Hays said he understood the shooting involved a controversy over a watermelon.

Rickard's Estate Is Under $100,000

Fortune of Late Sports Promoter Shrinks Enormously

NEW YORK.—The late Tex Rickard, who made a big business of fighting and wrestling, left an estate that has shrunk to less than $100,000, legate James A. Foley revealed Thursday.

The fact was disclosed when Surrogate Foley directed that $21,537, left in trust for Rickard's mother-in-law, now dead, is to be used as the principal of a trust fund for Maxine, the sports promoter's 13-year-old daughter.

The decision ends a long controversy between Maxine's guardians, Foley, Rickard's widow, and Rickard's own mother and grand mother, who say she should be a beneficiary under his will.

Long Leaves City and Goes Up-State

"Kingfish" Humorous in His Sparring With Reporters

BATON ROUGE, La.—(P)—Temporarily quitting the scene of his intense political war with Mayor T. Semmes Walmesley of New Orleans, Senator Huey P. Long came to the state capitol Friday with the announced intention of asking Governor O. K. Allen to withdraw the National Guard from New Orleans.

But at the same time he revived reports that he planned to have the governor call a special legislative session to pass laws giving the state more control over the city government.

Senator Long refused to comment to newsmen whether he was serious about the removal of troops from New Orleans, and made the remark that he would ask the governor to disband them in a jocular vein.

Must Demobilize
NEW ORLEANS, La.—(P)—Senator Huey P. Long was served at 6 o'clock Thursday with a court order demanding immediate demobilization of the National Guard which he had had Gov. O. K. Allen call out last Monday on a partial martial law proclamation to seize the office of the New Orleans voters' registration office.

Service was made on the senator in his suite on the top floor of the Roosevelt hotel by Louis Knop, deputy city sheriff who went to the hotel accompanied by Superintendent of Police George Reyer and Police Captain Joseph Cassard.

The court order was obtained in District Court by Mayor T. Semmes Walmesley, head of the city administration, which is in a political war with the state administration, led by Senator Long, over control of certain offices within the city.

The order was prepared at a conference of some 30 lawyers at the St. Charles hotel and Judge Nat Bone made it returnable next Tuesday. Attorney Edward Righthor, said that if the order was not obeyed Senator Long and Adj. Gen. Raymond Fleming could be jailed for contempt.

Knop and Reyer were admitted to the suite, head of Earl Christenberry, Long's secretary, poked his head out of a door in response to loud knocks.

Before admitting him the door was bolted and the senator was informed. Then the door was unlocked and the two men allowed to enter but admission was denied Captain Cassard.

For a week Senator Long has been conducting the state administration from the top of the Roosevelt hotel, looking down and shielding himself by body guards. He has denied reports that he plans to change his most intimate political adviser.

President Returns to the Mainland

Roosevelt Aboard S. S. Houston Arrives at Portland, Ore.

PORTLAND, Ore.—(P)—Bronzed and happy, President Roosevelt, after an unprecedented tour of America's tropic possessions and Hawaii, returned Friday to the mainland of his nation.

Ends Sea Voyage
PORTLAND, Ore.—(P)—President Roosevelt returned Thursday to the continental United States after spending a month sailing through tropic seas and visiting outlying American territory.

The cruiser Houston, his vacation ship, loomed up over the southwestern horizon off Astoria, Ore. It anchored near the Columbia river lightship pending completion of plans for proceeding to Portland where the chief executive will begin a cross-country inspection tour ending in Washington a week hence.

Elaborate preparations were made in Portland for the president's return.

Mrs. Roosevelt and their eldest son, James, were on their way here, Stephen Early and Louis M. Howe, presidential secretaries arrived this morning. Secretaries Dern, Ickes and Morgenthau of the War, Interior and the Treasury, respectively, were also enroute to Portland.

The presidential secretaries were confronted with huge stacks of official mail that had accumulated here in only two days. One of them said it was "enough to keep Mr. Roosevelt busy until he reaches the White House."

Aboard the Houston, President Roosevelt described as "rested" returned to his trunk a great volume of reports and other data he had been studying on the fast Pacific crossing from the Hawaiian Islands.

It was believed many of the reports dealt with the states of the Pacific northwest and with the northern states which the president will cross on his way from Portland to Washington.

Beck, Eulogizing Coolidge, Hits Debt

12-Billion Reduction Lost in 12 Months, Says Congressman

PLYMOUTH, Vt.—(P)—Representative James M. Beck, Republican of Pennsylvania, speaking Friday at exercises in honor of the late Calvin Coolidge, charged that the New Deal had subjugated "individualism" and said "dictatorial powers are not less dictatorial because they might be politely and apologetically exercised."

"Those who have in 12 short months added 12 billion dollars to the national debt ought not to criticize a president who reduced it by almost the same sum," he declared.

"The constitution never intended to vest all powers over trade and industry in the federal government."

"Today, never in the history of our nation has there been such a usurpation of power by the federal government."

"It can not be reconciled with the plain provisions of our constitution."

Mexican "Mail" Divorces Illegal

Many "Mail Order" Divorce Rings Have Been Shut Down

MEXICO, D. F.—(P)—Every Mexican "mail" divorce granted to Americans in the last few years probably would be declared illegal if appealed to the federal district courts, the American consulate general here said after studying recent higher court decisions.

These decisions clearly set forth as a principle of Mexican law that residence of both parties in Mexico at the time of the divorce is necessary to make the action legal.

No single decision nullifying divorces by the wholesale has been made nor is one possible under Mexican law, but the recent rulings open the way for individual appeals by the thousands of Americans who were divorced in their absence.

The investigation of American authorities co-operating with Mexican officials has resulted in the closing of several "mail order" divorce rings which defrauded many American citizens. It has slowed down the divorce business generally.

Widespread publicity and unfavorable rulings by several courts in the United States have failed to close on such matters. The consulate says its headquarters in Ciudad Juarez across the river from El Paso, where many Hollywood actors and actresses have come to obtain divorces.

Records show that the largest number of divorces granted in the United States in 1933 was 1,000, and in 1934, 1,200.

Records also show that the largest number of divorces granted in the United States in 1933 was 1,000, and in 1934, 1,200.

Atkins Announces 14% Payment, for New Total of 74%

RFC Loan Brings Deposit Recovery to Three-Quarters

MAY OBTAIN MORE
Additional $25,000 RFC Aid Possible—$102,000 Is Unpledged

A 14 per cent dividend amounting to $46,469.08 will be distributed to depositors in the closed Arkansas Bank & Trust Co. beginning Monday, August 6, it was announced Friday by W. S. Atkins, liquidating agent.

This raises the deposit recovery since the Bank's closing in 1930 to 74 per cent.

Mr. Atkins negotiated a loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation on certain collateral of the bank to make this 14 per cent dividend, the previous 60 per cent having been recovered from collections.

Checks Monday
Checks for the $46,469.08 will be available at the bank building beginning Monday, and depositors are asked to call for them.

Mr. Atkins said that following payment of 74 per cent there remains a deposit liability of $87,944.87, against which he has unpledged assets, notes, the bank building, its furniture and fixtures, and some real estate not put into the RFC, totalling $102,704.28.

He announced, however, that it might be possible to get an additional $25,000 from the RFC without further pledging of assets. He has filed a supplemental application under a law passed in the closing hours of the last congress which permits the RFC to loan up to 75 per cent of the appraised value of assets of banks closed prior to the 1933 moratorium.

May Get More
Mr. Atkins explained that while it is commonly understood that the RFC may loan up to 75 per cent of the assets of any closed bank, this provision originally applied only to the banks closed prior to that (the local bank closed in 1930) were aided on a basis of 50 per cent of the appraisal.

The present loan was on the basis of 50 per cent, but if the 75 per cent basis is approved in this individual case it may mean further recovery of $25,000, still leaving unpledged collateral of $102,704.28 toward final liquidation of deposits, Mr. Atkins said.

U. S. to Extradite Captain Poderjaj

Imprisoned in Vienna, He Is Indicted at New York

NEW YORK.—(P)—Captain Ivan Poderjaj, sought for questioning in the disappearance of his bride, Agnes C. Tuferson, was indicted Thursday on perjury charges.

The dashing Yugoslav, now detained by Viennan police on suspicion, was accused of swearing falsely that he was unmarried when he obtained a license to wed the woman lawyer 16 days before she disappeared December 20, 1933.

Regarded by the police as the key figure in the baffling Tuferson case, Poderjaj's indictment was the first step toward bringing him to New York under extradition proceedings.

The district attorney's office said that Governor Lehman would be asked to request, through the State Department, a presidential warrant for Poderjaj's return. Perjury is an extraditable offense under existing treaties between the United States and Austria.

Miss Tuferson, 43, lawyer for a utility company, was last seen at her New York apartment the night of December 20 when she and Poderjaj returned from the Hudson river pier from which they were to have sailed to Europe for a honeymoon.

It was explained they had quarreled at 16th pier and had decided to postpone their departure. Police learned of their departure. Police learned of their departure. Police learned of their departure.

Swelling in the Neck—A Sign of Unhealthy Gland
Any swelling that occurs in or about your neck most likely is due to glandular disturbance.

If it is in front of the neck, your thyroid gland may have been swollen, and if it is on the sides it may be due to the lymph glands. If it is in the back of the neck the trouble may be associated merely with some type of disturbance in the brain or its coverings, but it is most likely to be glandular.

A swelling that persists in the back of the neck most frequently is a small fatty tumor or glandular cyst. A cyst usually results from the blocking of the outlet of a gland, so that its contents are retained and produce swelling.

Another type of cyst occurs in the middle of the neck in front and is due to persistence in the throat of certain structures which exist in the child before birth, as well as in animals.

Any disturbance of the teeth, the tongue, the tonsils, the ears or the scalp may cause swelling among a number of glands of the neck. And if it isn't enough, you might remember that some of the neck glands may become swollen as a result of tuberculosis, cancer or certain forms of chronic glandular inflammation.

Furthermore, any kind of an infection that can occur elsewhere in the body can also affect the throat and adjacent tissues.

The most common type of swelling, however, is that of the thyroid gland, which lies low in the neck just over the windpipe. The doctor determines the presence of this type of disturbance by feeling with his fingers to know the exact position of the swelling.

This lets him know whether it is due to an accumulation of fluid, a change in the glandular structure, or some other type of growth.

It should be obvious that any swelling in your throat may represent a serious condition and should be investigated and placed under control. In most instances removal of the spots of infection inside the neck or throat will result in a diminution of the size of the lymph glands that are swollen.

In those cases where the swelling is due to a tumor or cyst, surgical attention may be necessary for cure.

Here is a fine new novel of the Civil War

"So Red the Rose," Tells of the Fall of the Old South
BY BRUCE CATTION

It seems to be extremely difficult for an American to write a true-to-life novel about the Civil War. The subject is too deep in sentiment, the characters have passed into the realm of pure romance; we forget that under the sentiment and the romance were all the cruelty, the brutality and the horror of a long and bitter war. Nevertheless in the last few years we have begun to get some really good Civil War novels. The most recent, and possibly the best of the lot is Stark Young's "So Red the Rose."

The book is a picture of the old South, the slave-holding aristocracy, which collided with an utterly different kind of society when industrial democracy arose and which went to pieces under the shock.

It tells about the planters of Mississippi—a whole clan of them, rich, proud and powerful, living in great manor houses in the country about Natchez. It shows the war only indirectly, we see it by reflection, by its effect on society which it described, by the revolutionary changes which it forces upon the whole Southern scene.

Now this book is excellent as pure narrative. It has an interesting story to tell, and it is filled with real, three-dimensional characters. But it is even better as an exposition of the currents in American life which expressed themselves in and through the war.

For it shows how one kind of civilization surrendered to another, and why it was inevitable that should happen, and what was lost and gained in the change. And it also shows the price that was paid for the change. Published by Scribner's the book sells for $2.50.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

In Buying Evening Face Powder Pick Reputable Brand

Evening face powders should be chosen as carefully as those for daytime. And the best way to do it, of course, is actually to try several shades on your skin before you buy a supply. Lavender, green and yellow are the three leading evening powder shades. There is not set rule as to which a brunette or a blonde should use—maybe all will be flattering, maybe none. The only way to find out is to make your own tests under artificial light. Remember that the green and lavender tones aren't supposed to take the place of your regular daytime powder. They're to be used on top of it. When you're making up for evening, put on your cosmetics, including powder, in the usual way. When you have finished, dust a bit of orchid or green over face and neck to give that exotic, luminous appearance that is so intriguing.

Peekaboo

Select face powder that's made by reputable cosmetician. There are no really simple tests that the average shopper can make to determine if or not a powder is pure. The only way you can be sure that you're getting a good product is to choose a well-known brand made by a manufacturer with a reputation for reliability. It has been estimated that the temperature at the center of the sun is not more than 180,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit.

SOPHIE KERR'S SUPERB LOVE STORY "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JANE TERRY, wealthy New York business woman, left her home town, Hamburg, after HOWARD JACKSON, brother of her cousin, had forced upon him and married Jane's best friend, AMY LOWE. Years later she has a bitter quarrel with Amy. She has an affair with HOWARD JACKSON, and when he offers to bear the expense of their child, she contemptuously declines him. Amy takes the baby, naming NANCY, promising never to reveal its parentage.

When America enters the World War, Howard joins the aviation corps. Amy's son is born and Howard has a brief leave from camp. He acquires a cold and a few weeks later stumbles into Jane's office, desperately ill with pneumonia. When Amy arrives Jane tells her that Howard has been her lover.

Now on with the story
CHAPTER XXXVIII
IT seemed to Jane that Amy was growing tall, taller, standing far above her tall, and sharp like a long shining sword. Involuntarily she stepped back, put the desk between them. Then Amy's voice, sharp and keen like a sword's edge, pitiless, despising—"If I could kill you, Jane Terry," said this voice, "I believe I would. To tell a lie like that, when he is sick and can't defend himself, to say you love him. . . I've always thought perhaps you did love him, but you don't. If you loved him, if you loved him one least bit, you wouldn't try to make him out a cheat, and—unfaithful—and low—and common."

The Colonel and Professor Lowe loomed up behind her. "What's this?" asked the Colonel. "What's the matter?—good morning, Miss Terry."

And Professor Lowe—"Why, how do you do, Jane?" But Jane had picked up the bag and vanished from the room.

"Why—how odd!" said Professor Lowe, mildly. "She didn't even speak."

"She's a very odd person, this Miss Terry," said the Colonel. "Sit down, Mrs. Jackson. We must see one of the nurses—"

"Isn't there any way," asked Amy, paying no attention to the Colonel's suggestion, "that we can get Howard out of here? Is he too sick to be moved? He mustn't stay here. He mustn't!"

The Colonel was struck with dismay. Was Jackson's wife, who until this moment had seemed to him sensible and quite beautiful—allowing of course for fatigue from her trip and her natural anxiety—was she going odd on him too! The Terry woman had worn out his patience in these three days! And if this was still another unreasonable, tiresome, unpleasant—but he looked at Amy and perceived that she was extremely moved, shaken with some wild and fearful purpose he did not understand. So he answered carefully: "I think it's extremely doubtful, but we'll ask the doctor. He ought to be along any moment."

"Better sit down, my dear," urged Professor Lowe. "Let me take your things. Here, this seems comfortable."

He looked with amazement at the room which Jane had done to the first night wave of Teutonic modernism, with horizontal striped walls, furniture of flat wood and bent silvered pipes, zebra skin cushions, and on one wall a large painting in the style of Picasso's early abstractions, to which a man, a girl, a stepladder, eight apples and three pears and a green banana, a foot-rule and what was apparently Titan's upper teeth were combined.

"But where is Howard?" said Amy, frantically. "Isn't there a nurse, or a servant, or someone—I want to see him!"

"There are two maids and two nurses," said the Colonel, "but we ought to see Doctor Gavin first. He could not take the responsibility of letting Amy enter that room to see her husband in his present state without the doctor's consent. But the arrival of the doctor relieved him."

"He is a desperately sick man," the doctor told Amy. "We've done everything we can. It is now solely a question of his own strength. He has the most dangerous type of pneumonia—his liver has been recovered. He is very strong. His heart is sound. There is no impediment. He has a chance. That's all I can say."

"May I see him?" asked Amy. "You may look at him from the door, though I—well, I think it's inadvisable. Don't speak to him. He won't know you anyway. I'll go with you."

So the doctor watched Amy, and held her arm, while for an instant she looked through the dingy window of the oxygen tent and saw Howard, blue-patched and gaunt, a stubby growth of beard giving him a face a strange neglected aspect, his lips drawn back, his eyes half closed, while all the room seemed with the suffering labor of his breath. Two white-masked, white-gowned nurses tended the oxygen pump—they and the strange apparatus made the room like a spectral laboratory.

Amy did not tremble now as she had trembled when she stood before Jane. She stood very still and put out one hand, palm up, a very little way, as if she offered him her own strength, her own undying tenderness and trust. It gave the hard-boiled doctor a queer awe. He felt her heart going past him, going to that dying man on the bed, pushing death back from him, denying it, refusing its terrible imminence.

As they went slowly to the living room, Amy said: "I wish he could be got out of this place."

"Ah," thought the doctor, "she knows. A damned shame." Alone he said, "It's impossible. Of course, he never should have been brought here, but he can't be moved."

"It must," went on Amy, almost as if talking to herself, "be the greatest inconvenience to Jane. Not that it matters—"

The doctor had always prided himself on being inhuman on personal matters. Now this girl's failed him. "Do you know Miss Terry?" he could not help asking. "I've known her ever since we were children," said Amy. She answered the question mechanically. Her whole being was back in the sickroom, holding fast to Howard, that he might not give up, slip away from her forever. "Maybe I was all wrong about the husband and Terry," thought the doctor, but he had one more question. "Miss Terry said that she was a relative of yours—or was it of your husband?"

AGAIN Amy replied mechanically: "Yes. They're distant cousins—connections, at least." Her voice changed to intense and anxious demand: "When will you know about Howard? Are you sure about his condition? Could we have more doctors, a consultation?—Would it help?"

By this time they were back with the Colonel and Professor Lowe, who heard what Amy had said. Professor Lowe came forward: "You must forgive my daughter's bluntness. She is in great distress."

"I'll give you the names of the best men in the city and arrange a consultation with any of them you choose, immediately. I appreciate Mrs. Jackson's feeling."

"If we could only get him away from here," cried Amy. "I can't stay here—and I must. I won't leave him."

"But my dear child," said her father, "Jane wouldn't want you to go. . . I wonder. . . where is Jane. . . if we could talk to her. . ."

"Jane won't come back," said Amy. She put her hand over her eyes, spoke in a low voice as if to herself. "But we must stay—we must stay."

"Suppose," said Professor Lowe, "that I speak to the maids. And I'll see Jane. I'll arrange things. I'll arrange everything. And in the meantime, if we could get at that consultation, doctor. Choose your own specialists. You know your field."

The doctor went to the telephone. Professor Lowe disappeared toward the kitchen to investigate and placate the servants and Amy was in the strange big room alone. She was in that state of weariness and exhaustion where rest is impossible and the nerves whip the mind into a ferment of activity for which there is no pause. She thought of everything at once: the baby left at home, it was fortunate now that she hadn't been able to nurse him; the awful scene with Jane—when Amy had told such lies—when Amy knew from the Colonel that the very day Howard had been taken sick was the first time he'd been away from the camp since his arrival from Texas! And even if the Colonel had not told her this, Jane might have known that Amy would never believe Howard unfaithful! She didn't know how Jane had got hold of Howard. It was, she supposed, just one of the impossible chances that sometimes fall. She was sure that Howard had been too sick to protest when Jane brought him here, and she wished, with a sickening rage, that she had actually struck Jane across her lying mouth. "I'll never forgive her," she thought, "never, never! She is vile, she is poisonous."

Triplets Follow Kayo
Hungry Lou performed for several weeks this season with the home of his big toe chipped. Knocked unconscious for 10 minutes by a pitched ball in an exhibition game at Norfolk, he banded out three triples the next day at the Yankee Stadium.

Five minutes were required to bring Gehrig to when Earl Whitehill banded him in 1933, but he finished the contest.

Gehrig was commencing to believe that he was to go on and on without another mishap of any kind when that happened, for he slipped through the 1931 and '32 campaigns without a scratch.

Handicapped to 379
Gehrig suffered most in preserving his phenomenal record for durability in 1930, when he chipped a bone in his left elbow in the first game of the grind, and played throughout the entire season with a sore arm. To make matters worse, he broke the little finger of his right hand in the last two weeks.

The throbbing whip and pound pinky handicapped the husky German to such an extent that he hit only 379. It was just as well for enemy pitchers that he wasn't all in one piece.

Gehrig submitted to two operations that fall. The "mice" were removed from his precious throwing arm, and an attempt was made to straighten the little finger. The latter remains crooked.

Yanked for Merkle
Gehrig hurt his right shoulder badly in bumping into the shade of the Boston dugout in chasing a foul in 1926, and had to be treated by a physician daily to remain in the thick of things in July, 1927.

He breezed through 1928, the Yankees' third straight pennant-winning year without as much as a dab of iodine, however.

Gehrig has participated in every game played by the New York club since the late Miller Huggins assigned him to first base in June, 1925.

"The start of my record came close to being held up late that season," beams Hungry Lou. "Hug was not yet convinced that I was not a fake. I was so sure of myself that I went against Whitehill in Detroit. But I got in when a right-hander finished 'em."

"I bled right-handers in my early days. Now I blast both right and left-handers."

Too Soft for Irish?
Joe Mulligan, a young right-hander plucked from the campus of Holy Cross by the Boston Red Sox, may within another season or two give the Celts something to cheer about in baseball.

Anything a pitcher with a tag like Mulligan does these days ought to be news in a game in which the McGinnitys and the Donovans have given 'way to the Generezes and Geronimizers.

Irish names are becoming as scarce among the stars of baseball as they are in boxing.

Perhaps it is because both sports have grown too soft for them.

Courage
Courage is the price that life exacts for granting peace.
The soul that knows it knows no release
From little things
Knows not the livid loneliness of fear.
Nor mountain heights where bitter joy can hear
The sound of wings.
How can life grant up
How can life grant us a boon of living compensate
For dull gray ugliness and pregnant hate
Unless we dare
The soul's dominion? Each time we make a choice, we pay
With courage to behold resistless day,
And count it fair. —Amelia Earhart.

Al Smith, Seabury Quit Reform Board

They Are Disgusted at Politicians' Blocking Charter Move

NEW YORK—Charter revision for this great metropolis will have to get along without Al Smith. Frankly disgusted, the chairman, stamped out in the middle of a meeting of the New York City Charter Revision Commission Thursday night and went home.
"I'm through," he said, reaching for his hat. "My formal resignation will be sent in the morning."
A few minutes later Samuel Seabury, vice chairman, also registered his disgust and walked out on the meeting. He too, said he would resign.

"Nothing can be accomplished with the obstructionists blocking things the way they are," Seabury declared as he strode out.
The double walk-out was preceded by two and a half hours of violent dispute. Smith and Seabury had gone into the meeting determined to give their foes a final chance to get aboard the reform wagon. The offer was refused. The other members insisted on hamstringing simplification of the present unwieldy city government, because of the fat plums it would pick from the hands of district leaders.

FORD DEALERS DRIVE OUT TWO TRAINLOADS OF FORD V-8 TRUCKS

The great revival of business in Arkansas, Tennessee and Mississippi was shown last Friday when seventy-five Ford dealers drove out a special shipment of two trainloads of Ford V-8 trucks from the Memphis Branch of the Ford Motor Co.

The Ford dealers, highly enthusiastic about the great increase in Ford V-8 truck sales, say that sales began to increase rapidly last month. Thousands of old trucks, which are being maintained at high operating costs, are being replaced with powerful, economical Ford V-8 trucks.

The new heavy duty features, the new full floating rear axle, the new V-8 truck engine and the new dual down draft carburetor of the Ford truck, combined with its low price, makes it a popular choice for every hauling need.

Grand Canyon Is Second Subject For National Park Stamp Series

What is in many ways the most overwhelming natural phenomenon in the world has been chosen for the second of the new series of stamps the government is issuing on U. S. national parks. The Grand Canyon of the Colorado is an awe-inspiring fissure cut from 4000 to 6000 feet deep into the Colorado plateau in northern Arizona. It is from one to 15 miles across at the top and extends 233 miles along the river's course. The more interesting sections of the canyon region have been made a national park, property of the people, to insure preservation of their matchless scenery and outdoor value.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 5.

The solution of social problems, especially as they affect the individual in financial pressure and hardship, would be easy if it could be met in every case with the miraculous power exercised by Elisha in the story that constitutes the major part of our lesson.

The situation is simple and one that has been, unfortunately, too often repeated in the history of every society.

A woman had lost her husband by death, and a creditor was pressing for settlement of debts. The age permitted some practices that are no longer in use today, and the creditor came to take the woman's two sons as bondsmen until the debt should be paid.

In her distress she appealed to Elisha, and Elisha, according to the ancient story, solved her problem by a miracle. She had in her house only a pot of oil—a slight thing that intervened between her and complete poverty.

Nevertheless, Elisha told her to go and borrow vessels from her neighbors, empty vessels and many of them. Then he told her to pour the oil into the vessels, setting them aside as they were filled.

The woman did as she was told, and as the oil was poured out it increased until all the vessels were filled, though even more were brought. As she came joyfully to tell Elisha what had happened, he told her to go and sell the oil, pay the debt, and maintain her children with the balance.

It is a beautiful story which we wish might be applied very directly to all such problems. Unfortunately, the method does not seem available, and there is little hope that we can help necessitous widows and other needy people today through the miraculous means.

Nevertheless, the story has a deeper significance than might appear. Deeply written in the record is the prophet's profound sympathy with the woman and his willingness to help her.

If there were everywhere the same sympathy with the distressed, needy, and oppressed, and the willingness to help them, considering all the resources of our modern life, the things available for such help would correspond very truly to the cruise of oil that never failed.

Though the powers that God offers us for solution of our social problems today are not miraculous, they are so abundant, if we are only following God's way and are obedient to his will, that not even this amazing story could over-represent the increasing fruitfulness and productivity of the means of ministrations.

Along with this is a story of the increase of loaves of barley bread and full ears of corn that corresponds in some respects to the story in the New Testament to the miraculous feeding of five thousand.

Here again, though we may not expect to see such miracles repeated in our modern society, the stories suggested the inexhaustible powers and resources with which God has endowed us in nature and life, if we will but make use of these means in God's way, with the courage of those who above all things are devoted to the doing of his will and to the service of humanity in love and ministrations.

NRA to Protect "Little Fellow"

Johnson Declares Independent Enterprise Still Necessary

CHICAGO—(AP)—General Hugh S. Johnson pledged full powers of the NRA Thursday to maintain status quo of the small business man. Addressing a luncheon meeting of Illinois code authorities, he predicted a day when evolution of mass distribution methods might eliminate small enterprises but added:

"This is no time to permit such sudden and explosive change."

He said that the Recovery Administration did not favor price fixing, and would never permit exploitation of the public by price provisions in the codes. Nevertheless, he promised that such provisions would never be withheld when necessary to save an industry or maintain decent labor standards.

He said the NRA code "must not be used to exploit or deny its rights to labor; to exploit the public, to produce monopoly or oppress small enterprise, or to take advantage of related industries."

What fair practice codes could do, he said, was to eliminate abuses long recognized by business as destructive of legitimate profit and practices.

"In every industry there is always about a 10 per cent minority—the chiseling fringe—who just don't give a damn," Johnson said. "Now the effects of competition throughout the industry are such that the practices of 10 per cent can drag down to their level the whole of an industry."

"It may be that mail order houses and filling station sales should run out all the dealers—that chains should eliminate all independents in every line of employment that employment and independent earnings there should be reduced by one-third, but this is no time to permit such a sudden and explosive change."

"With between 10 and 12 million people unemployed and general commerce and industry barely recovered from the worst mortality in history this is no time to withdraw the actual and moral support of the NRA from our convalescent structure. To the full extent of the powers of the NRA we shall maintain the status quo of small enterprises in this country."

London for 10 days and is taking the sinister stone with her. Landing at Southampton, she was wearing jewelry, including the diamond, estimated to be worth $500,000.

Mrs. McLean said that although she had possessed the stone for 25 years she had escaped bad luck so far. "But I do dread the effects on my friends and do all that is possible to keep them from touching it," she said. "If they do, then the curse falls on them." It is understood that the purser became ill soon after handling the stone during the cruise.

"I'm simply thrilled! though it's hard deciding how to spend it. Maybe I'll buy an all-wave radio . . . maybe I'll make a down-payment on a sporty little car . . .

"Alice, my best friend, suggested an electric refrigerator. It really sounded good—at first. Then Jack and I decided to check up. We asked our butcher among others—he knows refrigeration from A to Z!"

"It's all right," he said, "for my meat market, because my cooler is ventilated. But I wouldn't have an electric outfit in my own home. The home-sized electric cabinets are all air-tight—you don't get any circulation and pretty soon your food tastes like onions, fish or what-not. Ice, on the other hand, really 'air-conditions' your refrigerator. Food odors are absorbed by the melting ice and carried down the drain. Foods stay fresher-tasting. I use ice at home," said our butcher, "and I advise you to do the same!"

"So I'm still $100 ahead. P'haps I'll buy a new evening outfit . . ."
